LOCAL COMPANY RECALLS MEAT; STATE INVESTIGATES

Schreiner's Fine Sausages Recalls Ready-to-Eat Meats

The Arizona Department of Agriculture wants to alert consumers Schreiner's Sausage Company is voluntarily recalling 28 ready-to-eat meat products from wholesalers. The company will post the information in its Phoenix retail store for consumers.

The Department is conducting an investigation of the events that led to the recall specifically concerning practices to prevent the spread of Listeria. The concerns arose during a routine inspection.

State-inspected official processors are required to provide proof to the Department that they are using good sanitary practices. With the current information, the Department must consider the products to be adulterated.

A complete list of the recalled ready-to-eat beef, pork and chicken products is attached as well as the identifying stamps that will help consumers identify them. The products were sold before December 1, 2014.

If someone has the product in their refrigerator or freezer, the meats should be thrown out or returned to the place of purchase. Listeria is a bacteria that can cause life-threatening infections, especially for people 65 years or older, persons with weakened immune systems, and pregnant women.

The Department conducts recall effectiveness checks to verify recalling firms notify their customers of the recall and that steps are taken to make certain that the product is no longer available to consumers.
